Evaluation of protection

1. Frontal attack from the hide (commands: "ATTACK", "OUT")

20 + 5 points (procedure + drop)

The handler with dog (which can be on the leash) proceeds in direction of the hide where the helper not visible to the dog is located. Under the direction of the judge, the helper comes out of the hide in running pace and engages in an attack on the handler and dog. The handler can keep dog on the leash during the attack. The dog has to block attack by means of grip on the protection sleeve of the helper. The helper is to pressure the dog by way of threatening stick gestures without hit the dog according to rules of International utility dog trials. At the instruction of the judge, the helper stops. The dog has to release after a short command to "out" given from distance not shorter than two paces from behind the dog. If the dog does not out after the first permitted command, the handler will receive instructions from the judge for a second and third command to "out" given from the same distance from a dog. If the dog does not out after the third command (one permitted – two additional), a five point deduction will result. In this case, at judge's instruction, the handler goes to his dog and physically release the grip of the sleeve. The dog can continue to compete.

2. Attack on the dog out of motion (commands "ATTACK", "OUT")

20 + 5 points (procedure + drop)

The handler is advised to go to the designated place with his dog approx. 40 paces from the helper. The handler unleashes the dog and holds him on the collar or the harness. At the direction of the judge, the helper in a running pace comes out of the hide. The helper, still running, charges the dog and handler in a frontal attack with loud shouts and threatening gestures. The handler under the direction of the judge releases his dog to "defend". The handler can immediately walk to his dog. The dog is put under pressure through shouting and stick threats and pressured by the helper, without hitting the dog, according to rules of International utility dog trials. At the instruction of the judge, the helper stands still. After the helper stops, the handler can come to his dog in distance not less than 2 paces from behind the dog. The dog has to release after a short command to "out". If the dog does not out after the first permitted command, the handler will receive instructions from the judge for a second and third command to "out" given from the same distance from a dog. If the dog does not out after the third command (one permitted – two additional), a five point deduction will result. In this case, at judge's instruction, the handler goes to his dog and physically release the grip of the sleeve. At the instruction of the judge, the handler puts his dog on the leash and leaves the field.

Additional instructions:

- if the dog in any phase of defence demonstrate lack of courage, the whole protection phase will be evaluated with "0" points
- when helper stops the attack, dog can release even before the handler comes to his dog
- if the dog leaves the helper or the handler give him a command so that the dog remains with the helper, the whole protection phase will be evaluated with "0" points
- if the dog grip other parts of the body rather than the protection sleeve the whole protection phase will be evaluated with "0" points
- the verbal stimulation of dog before and during the action is allowed
- the command to "out" used in conjunction with the dog's name is considered as second command
- if the handler will go too close to the dog while giving command to "out", a five point deduction will result
